Champion Women provides legal advocacy for girls and women in sports, including equal opportunities to play, equal scholarships and treatment, sexual abuse in sport, and an end to employment, LGBTQ, and pregnancy discrimination.

The Problem: Despite Title IX’s middle-age, with strong, clear administrative regulations and case law, schools are still not complying with the law, causing women to lose valuable educational opportunities.

- If Title IX was a reality in college and university athletic departments, schools would be providing women with at least 150,000 more varsity sports experiences.
- Every year, colleges and universities short women $190 million dollars in athletic college scholarships.

Champion Women’s Strategy: Deliver detailed legal memos to the top 52 NCAA universities that are out of Title IX compliance, including Prongs 1, 2, and 3. Schools themselves provide the relevant data via the Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act. http://ope.ed.gov/athletics/

- UNC Chapel Hill: needs to add 248 women; $3.9 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- Troy University: needs to add 241 female athletes, and $2.8 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- UC Berkeley: needs to add 237 female athletes, $2.3 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- Florida Atlantic University: needs to add 204 athletes, $2.4 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- University of Southern Mississippi: needs to add 207 more women, $3.6 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- Stephen F. Austin University: needs to add 182 athletes, $1.9 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- Southeastern Louisiana University: needs to add 193 athletes, $2.3 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- Western Kentucky University: needs to add 189 athletes, $2.5 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- University of Tennessee Chattanooga: needs to add 149 athletes, $1.8 million in athletic scholarship aid.
- UNC Greensboro: needs to add 161 female athletes, $1.45 million in athletic scholarship aid.

In Just the Top 10 Schools, Women Are Being Denied 2,011 Opportunities to Play and $25 Million in Athletic Scholarship Dollars

Key Objectives:

a.) Add new sports & scholarship dollars for women …. without tax dollars, litigation or OCR involvement.

b.) Engage the academic and student body community with the athletic department.

c.) Support for women’s coaches and administrators, when they speak up on behalf of the women athletes.

d.) Assure that Title IX and women’s sports remain a priority through the new restructuring of collegiate athletics after O’Bannon and Northwestern, two legal decisions designed to add more commercialization to intercollegiate athletics, untethered from its educational mission.

The Schools Are:

Nancy Hogshead-Makar, JD * www.ChampionWomen.org * @iChampionWomen
Hogshead@ChampionWomen.org